ians, men and women, were present, Towards midnight the visitors went out to the sidewalk. Through the indiscretion of one of the party a sectional feud which had existed in Italy or years was brought up. The men and women were inflamed with just enough bad liquor to take up the old controversy.

Sides were taken and a general fight followed. Policeman Culhane was standing at Union street and Third avenue at 2.39 A. M. He heard five shots freed from the direction of President street. As he rounded the corner he saw a crowd of Italians engaged in a rough and revolver and staried in the first and revolver and staried in the first and revolver and staried in the first and revolver and staried in other hands taking loudly. A woman lay on the floor meaning. As Culhane entered the building the Italians rushed in upon him. He wielded his stick with great effect with one hand, while he struck right and left with his revolver with the other. He pulled Michael Derego, of 482 President street, and while he struck right and left with his revolver with the other. He pulled Michael Derego, of 482 President street, out of the hallway, and put him under arrest. He then went to the aid of the woman, who was Mrs. Grenada Umbrianna, of 249 Fourth avenue. She had a pistol wound in her left leg just above the knee cap.

Mrs. Umbrianna pointed out Renati Broncello, of 482 President street, as the man who shot her.

of being immates of a policy shop.

For several days complaints have been lodged at the Tenth Precinct Station to the effect that a policy shop was running at 171 Third avenue.

Detectives Graham and Raleigh investigated and decided to raid the place last night.

M. E. Odell, the alleged proprietor, was not in the place when the detectives arrived. Francis McGuire, who was in charge, denied that it was a policy shop.

The front part of the place is osten-ibly a cigar store. The only way out of the back roors is by a narrow pas-age and two windows.

When the detectives reached the back woom they found each window clogged ap by men endeavoring to escape.

A large number of policy slips and a mantity of gambling paraphernalia were
